SCAVENGE Movie sites and Chicago details

Loop

This is your mission, should you choose to accept it: Spend Saturday afternoon learning about Chicago history by searching for it through clues and puzzles. First, pick one of two Loop-based scavenger hunts: Watson Adventures' Starring the Loop (start: Daley Plaza, 55 W. Randolph St.) or Chi-Town Hunt-Down, Where the EI? (the Bean at Millennium Park, 201 E. Randolph St.). Second, show up and start the hunt. In Starring the Loop, you'll seek out the filming sites of such movies as "Ferris Bueller's Day Off" and "The Blues Brothers" (which is fitting since this week is the 30th anniversary of the John Belushi/Dan Aykroyd film). In Where the EI, you'll solve Chicago-centric clues by snapping photos before heading to a 5:30 p.m. after party at new '80s-themed bar the Wormhole (1462 N. Milwaukee Ave.). Order tix online: Starring the Loop: $19.50, watsonadventures.com; Where the EI: $20, statetheatrechicago.com
When: 2 p.m. Saturday for each

EAT Randolph Street food

West Loop

The best of this West Loop strip's food hits the street this weekend as part of Taste of Randolph Street (Randolph and Peoria Streets), the annual foodie street fest. Try eats from De Cero, Market, Pasha, Wishbone, Macello's and more, and hear tunes from Chicago punk marching band Mucca Pazza (5:30 p.m. Saturday), Champaign indie poppers Headlights (5:30 p.m. Sunday) and experimentalists Califone (7 p.m. Sunday). Get full, dance it off. $10 donation.
When: 2-11 p.m. Saturday; 2-10 p.m. Sunday

MAKE Father's Day dining reservations

Bucktown/Wicker Park, Lincoln Park, Gold Coast

Deals and freebies abound for Pop on Dad's Day (which is Sunday, btw). Where to find them? If he's a whiskey man, take him to the Southern (1840 W. North Ave. 773-342-1840), where dads with a photo of their kid(s) get a shot of Old Grand-Dad whiskey and goodie bag. If you've never known him not to quote "The Godfather," grab a seat at the Tin Lizzie (2483 N. Clark St. 773-549-1132), screening the first and second "Godfather" movies all day. For the full treatment, make reservations at Balsan in the Elysian Hotel (11 E. Walton St. 312-646-1400) for brunch and Dad gets a voucher for a future drink in Bernard's Bar and a shave in the hotel spa.
When: 11 a.m.-while supplies last (Southern); 11 a.m.-3 a.m. (Tin Lizzie), 10 a.m.-3 p.m. (Balsan) Sunday

HEAR Mos Def

Marquette Park

The rapper-actor swoops into town as part of the arts and music fest Takin' it to the Streets: Urban International Festival (Marquette Park, 6734 S. Kedzie Ave.) supporting Muslim culture. Mos Def hits the Streets Stage at 7:30 p.m., though other hip-hop, world music and soul musicians, plus DJs, graffiti artists, a shopping bazaar, basketball tourney and lots more take over the park all day.
When: 9 a.m.-9 p.m. Saturday

WATCH 'Da Bears Movie Dat Wasn't'

Lincoln Park

For the time being, Chicago is a Blackhawks town. Then it'll split between the Sox and Cubs. But it's hard to deny Chicago football any time of year, and no one knows that more than the writers of "Da Bears Movie Dat Wasn't," a screenplay created from "Saturday Night Live" sketches about Bears "super fans." The play never saw the light of day, but this weekend, as part of TBS' Just For Laughs festival, it'll hit the stage at Park West (322 W. Armitage Ave.

Be Chicago's top at-home chef

Welcome to RedEye's Virtual Kitchen Stadium, where all it takes to win is your kitchen, a camera and a love for food. And it's taking place TODAY.

The best part? Our guest judges. In the past, we've had Rick Bayless and Stephanie Izard. This time around it's The Hearty Boys, Dan Smith and Steve McDonagh, who won the first "Next Food Network Star" contest.

All you have to do is cook this weekend. If you win, your recipe will be on the menu at the Hearty Boys' restaurant, Hearty, and you will get to cook a demo at the Taste of Chicago and on WGN-TV's "Midday News."

How to play:

Step 1: Visit redeyechicago.com to find this week's theme.

Step 2: Prepare a dish for the theme.

Step 3: Take a photograph and e-mail it to redeyetalk@gmail.com by 9 a.m. Monday. Include your recipe and a few sentences about the dish. Don't forget your name, age, neighborhood and phone number.

Not so slick

As the Gulf Coast oil disaster seeps toward its third month of destruction, it appears nobody can get this thing right. On Wednesday, President Obama and BP announced the creation of a $20 billion fund to aid the victims of the oil leak. It took no time for two high-profile figures, U.S. Rep. Joe Barton (R-Texas) and BP Chairman Carl-Henric Svanberg, to make missteps in addressing the fund. Let's review.

Carl-Henric Svanberg

THE QUOTE

"I hear comments sometimes that large oil companies are greedy companies or don't care, but that is not the case with BP. We care about the small people."

—Svanberg, who is Swedish and might have made the slight unintentionally, to reporters in Washington

THE REACTION

"We're not small people. We're human beings. They're no greater than us. We don't bow down to them. We don't pray to them."

—New Orleans resident Justin Taffinder

THE CLOSURE

"What I was trying to say—that BP understands how deeply this affects the lives of people who live along the Gulf and depend on it for their livelihood—will best be conveyed not by any words but by the work we do to put things right for the families and businesses who've been hurt."

—Svanberg, in a statement

Joe Barton

THE QUOTE

"I apologize. I do not want to live in a country where any time a citizen or a corporation does something that is legitimately wrong is subject to some sort of political pressure that is—again, in my words, amounts to a shakedown. So I apologize."

—Barton to BP CEO Tony Hayward on Thursday during a Congressional hearing

THE REACTION

"While people in the Gulf are suffering from the actions of BP, the Republicans in the Congress are apologizing to BP."

—House Speaker Nancy Pelosi

THE CLOSURE

"I apologize for using the term 'shakedown' with regard to yesterday's actions at the White House this morning, and I retract my apology to BP. I regret the impact that my statement this morning implied that BP should not pay for the consequences of their decisions and actions in this incident."

—Barton, in a written statement

That's about how long it had been since Patti DeLuna (left) had last piloted a plane. Then on Monday, the first officer on an American Airlines flight into O'Hare fell sick, and DeLuna, a flight attendant, helped the captain land the Boeing 767, the Tribune reported.

"I was the best available [backup pilot] they had on the plane," DeLuna told the Tribune on Tuesday from her California home. "I spent a lot of time in the cockpit looking at the flight deck panel and asking questions. My first question to the captain was, 'Where are the brakes?'"

Forever young

Age is more than a number—it's how you dress, behave and maintain your body

By Erin M. Sarris

FOR REDEYE

The party's over for Angelica Kucynski the moment she spots her first wrinkle.

Though the 21-year-old says she frequently is guilty of social drinking, smokes cigarettes daily and tends to neglect her healthy fruits and veggies, she swears she will change her ways the moment she notices a change in her appearance.

"I think just about anyone agrees that we want to stay looking as young as possible," said Kucynski, a Des Plaines veterinary assistant. "If I ever get to the point that I'm looking older, I know I'll cut down."

She might not want to wait. According to a study published in April by the Archives of Internal Medicine, those guilty of four unhealthy lifestyle habits—smoking tobacco; frequent alcohol consumption; lack of exercise; and skipping out on fruits and vegetables—appear to be 12 years older than those who don't have those habits.

The research should be a wake-up call to be proactive about maintaining youth, even for those in their 20s and 30s, according to Jackie Silver, author of "Aging Backwards: Secrets to Staying Young."

"The time to start is now," said Silver, who maintains a highly involved anti-aging regimen that includes nutrition, exercise, beauty care and supplements as well as a low-stress lifestyle. "If you start now, you'll be as young and as beautiful as you are today, forever."

Youth-conscious consumers appear to be taking heed. The market for anti-aging health and appearance products will reach nearly $300 billion by 2015, according to a 2009 report by San Jose, Calif.-based market research firm Global Industry Analysts.

But not everyone is shopping for the fountain of youth.

Brian Ford, a 29-year-old student from Lakeview, said he has no concerns about appearing older and considers aging a natural part of life.

"Until recently, aging was more widely accepted for both men and women, and there wasn't so much pressure from society to look 20 years younger," he said. "I'm not willing to take extreme measures to prevent it."

For those who do want to slow their aging clocks, the recent aging study suggests it's not all that difficult. Among nearly 5,000 British adults, the healthiest group with the longest collective lifespan included reformed smokers and those who had quit; women who consumed fewer than two drinks daily and men who had fewer than three; those who got at least two hours of physical activity per week; and those who ate fruits and vegetables at least three times daily.

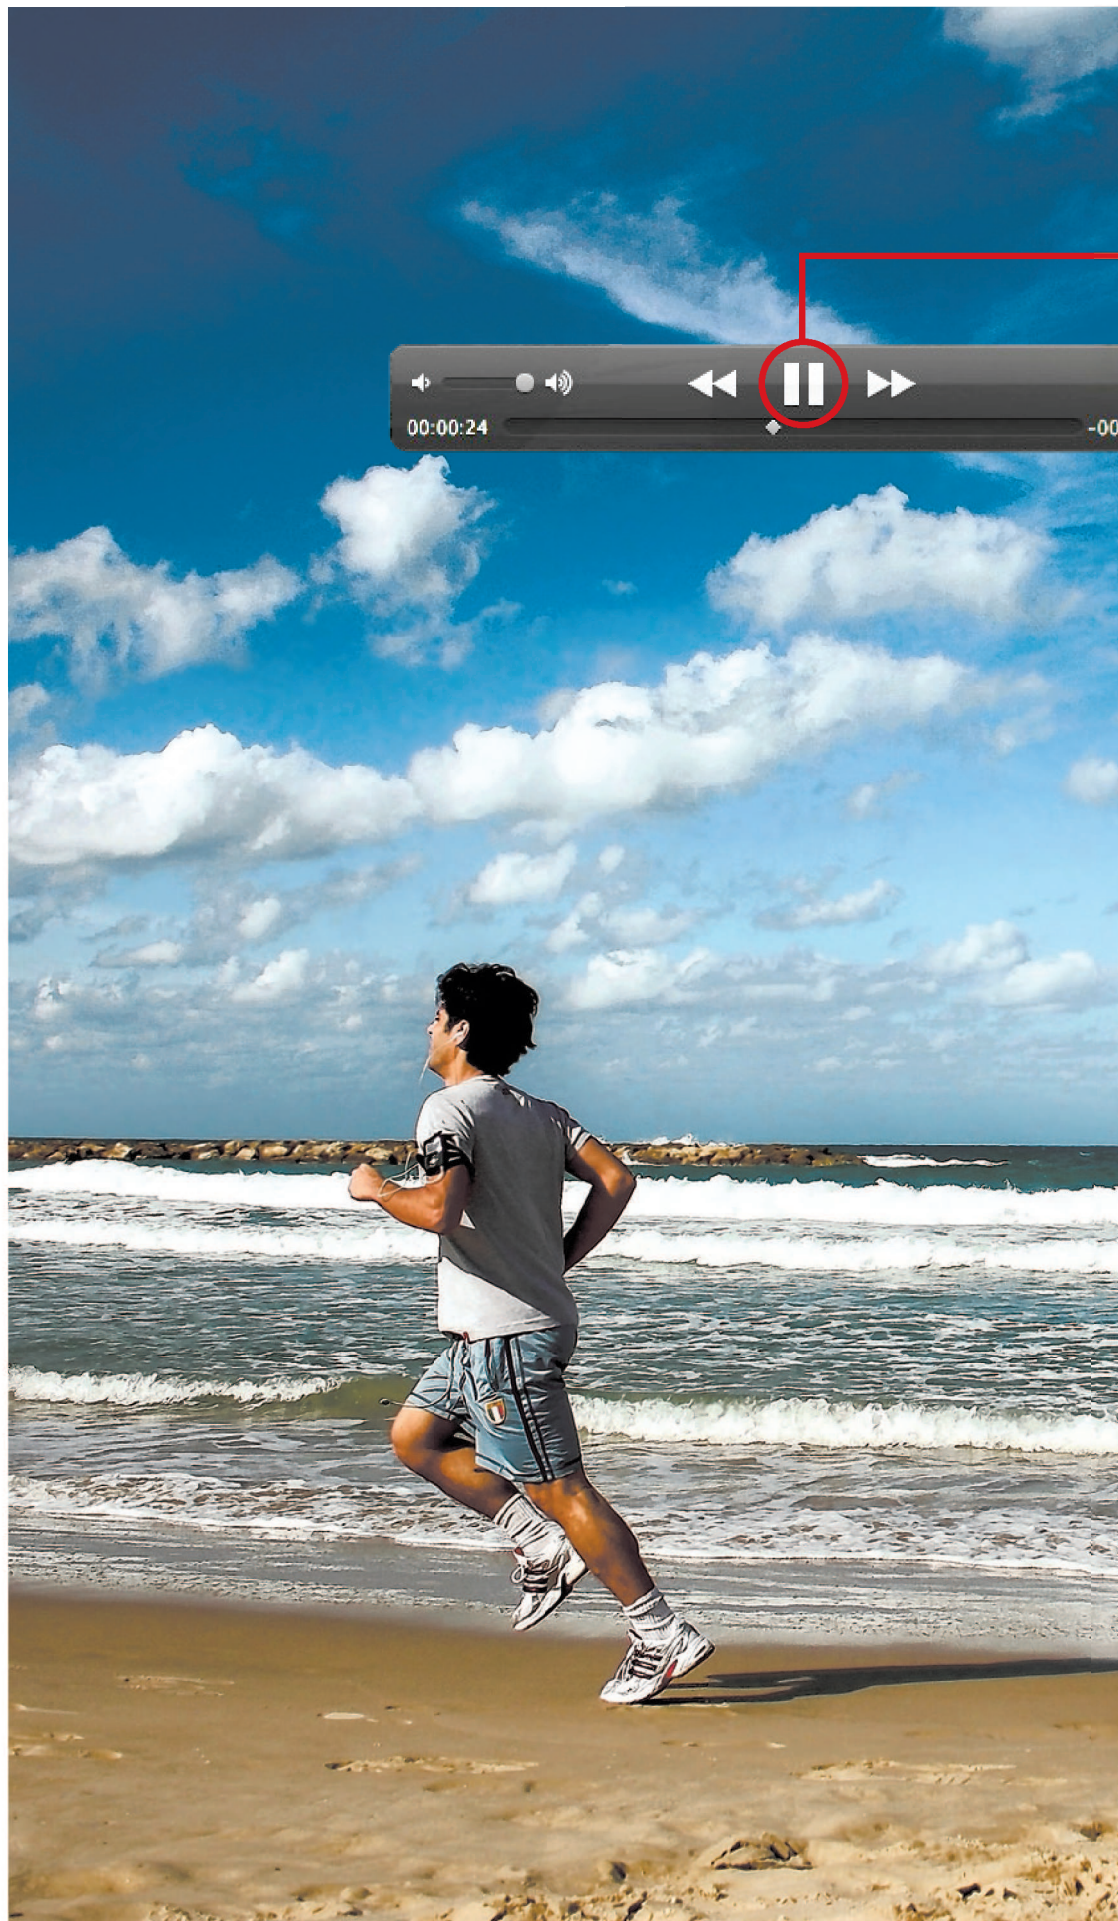

That sounds just about right to Silver.

"Moderation is everything," she said. "I'm turning 51, and I still get carded, and it's all because of a lifestyle of moderation." ERIN M. SARRIS IS A REDEYE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR.

If you start now, you'll be as young and as beautiful as you are today, forever.”

—Jackie Silver, author of "Aging Backwards: Secrets to Staying Young."

Tips to put the pause on aging

Forget the number of candles on your birthday cake. If you're conscious of your reputation, what matters is not how old you are but how modern you appear, according to Kali Evans-Raoul, founder and president of The Image Studios, a Chicago-based image firm that helps its clients look, speak and behave in a manner that benefits their overall image.

"In the United States, we are the society of 'gimme new, gimme change, gimme what's next,'" Evans-Raoul said. "Regardless of your age, if there's even the slightest hint that you ooze what once was, you're not on the radar for much of modern American society."

Exercise and a sensible diet are traditional (and proven) strategies for keeping the wrinkles and sags away, but what are some other tricks to staying young? RedEye got the secrets to maintaining a fresh, contemporary image from Evans-Raoul and Jackie Silver, author of "Aging Backwards: Secrets to Staying Young." E.S.

Stay connected

Can you name the heroine in the next "Transformers" movie? Or give your opinion on who should replace Simon Cowell on "American Idol"? Evans-Raoul stresses that regardless of your age, what really matters is being topical. By using TV, the Internet and constantly connected smart phones to stay up to date with news and cultural trends, you will remain relevant and well-informed. "People don't just wake up one day and decide they want to be washed up," she said. "But as life gets complex, you have new time constraints, and people have to create strategies to make sure their message is consistent is controlled." AP PHOTO

Know your lingo

Do you still use slang such as "da bomb" or "wicked"? Like clothing, certain figures of speech can go out of style in a hurry. Give yourself an image upgrade by taking some conversation cues from TV shows and websites. "If you are totally hip and in the know but just can't articulate it, you'll still be the person leaning up against the wall at a party," Evans-Raoul said. Even non-verbal cues, such as the coffee you drink and the newspaper or PDA you read, send messages about your personality, demographic and age.

Give and receive

Volunteering is good for the soul—and apparently for the body too. "Young people want to give back, and giving back is anti-aging," Silver said. How? Silver described it as the "helper's high," a term for the feel-good sensation that accompanies doing the right thing. Hormones such as serotonin surge during and after philanthropic experiences due to sensitive neurons in the brain that thrive off helping others, keeping stress at bay and stunting aging effects on your body.

Protect your ears

Who knew that taking care of your earlobes—yes, earlobes—is one of the best ways to stop the aging clock? Though they might seem like a very small portion of your overall appearance, earlobes can give away your true age, Silver said. "Anything you slather on your face is something you need to slather on your earlobes, neck and the top of your hands," she said. And ladies, listen up: Cute, funky earrings aren't a complete no-no, but make sure the insides are hollow and lightweight to avoid sagging or wrinkles to earlobes, which can tack on years to your appearance.

Balance your exercise

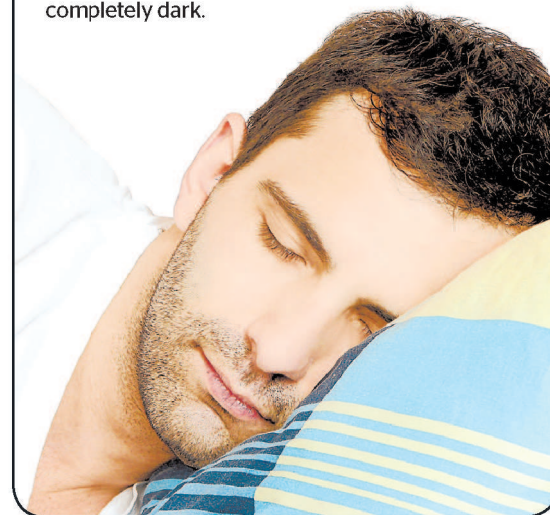

As obvious as it is, it needs to be said: With every birthday that passes, it becomes harder to naturally stay pin thin without any real effort, Silver said. Adopting a workout routine with a healthy balance of cardio and weights will help you keep off the pounds that can make you look older than you really are.

Be fashion forward

Dress and grooming are two of the most important indicators of how current we are, Evans-Raoul said. "Wardrobe is important because it's the largest piece of your visual image, and you can see it a block away," she said. In terms of personal care, straight, white teeth, a modern hairstyle and well-groomed facial hair all are key indicators of health and vitality. If you suspect your fashion or grooming sense could use some updating, Evans-Raoul suggests you select a modern muse and tear out images from a magazine to take with you to the mall or salon.

Get some sleep

"They call it beauty rest for a reason," said Silver, who cited the aging effects of not getting enough sleep. Worse than getting too little sleep is having light in your bedroom. Silver cited studies that showed light at night has been linked to irregular sleeping patterns, and yes, this includes TVs, computers and nightlights. In order to get your recommended eight hours of shut-eye to maintain a healthy lifestyle, keep your room completely dark.

Know what's new

If the way you entertain your friends or dates is passe (like the same old dinner and a movie), you're sending a message that you're "off the pulse," Evans-Raoul said. Make an effort to stay current with new restaurant openings, museum exhibits and other ideas that showcase your firm grip on the pulse of the city. After all, most of society's movers and shakers aren't those with the most money or intellect, she said, but those who appear contemporary and forward-thinking.

NEWSDAY

The guest list for Drake's official debut, "Thank Me Later," reads like a roll call for the future Hip-Hop Hall of Fame.

There are appearances from Lil Wayne (1), Jay-Z (2), Alicia Keys (3), T.I. (4) and Young Jeezy (5). Producers include Kanye West, Timbaland and Swizz Beatz. So how could this fail?

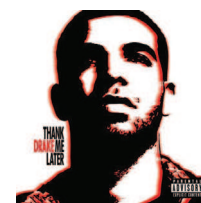

Well, it can't really. Drake, previously best known for his role in "Degrassi: The Next Generation," handles himself pretty well on "Thank Me Later," positioning himself as a middle-of-the-road alternative to the edgier antics of his co-signers.

The first single, "Over," finds him rhyming like a less explosive Weezy, while the West-produced

"Show Me a Good Time" and "Find Your Love" have him rap-singing like a more well-adjusted 'Ye circa "80s and Heartbreak." While Drake's rapping and singing is smoother, it's also less distinctive—a problem that only gets magnified when he teams up with his more famous mentors.

Drake opens "Miss Me" promisingly, but once Weezy drops his verses, reportedly via phone from Rikers, he immediately is outclassed, both in content and delivery. It happens during "Light Up" with Jay-Z, who takes over with brotherly advice and memorable lines like, "I don't do too much blogging/I just run the town, don't do too much jogging."

Drake shows plenty of promise on "Thank Me Later," but he still has plenty of growing to do before he can match his collaborators.

TV
Leverage 8 p.m. Sunday, TNT

You can't beat "Leverage" for pure escapism when you're feeling like getting back at "the man." Nate Ford (Timothy Hutton) and his crew of con artists, grifters and thieves plot each week to take down corporate bullies, crooked politicians or other people abusing their powers. In "The Jailhouse Job," the team has to figure out a way to bust their boss out of prison, which means another fun caper involving disguises, computer hacking and a lot of fights. Sit back, imagine that's you putting it to your boss and enjoy. CURT WAGNER, REDEYE

The Real L Word

9 p.m. Sunday, Showtime

Apparently, no "real" lesbians in L.A. have short hair, more than a few extra pounds and wear little to no makeup wherever they go. That's what I get from "The Real L Word," the new reality series from "The L Word" creator Ilene Chaiken, who has found seven good-looking gals to open their lives to her cameras. That diversity issue (not to mention ethnic diversity issues) aside, what I like about the show is no one seems to be playing to the camera, and they tell stories I'd encourage homophobic folks to watch. CURT WAGNER, REDEYE

Bill Strickland

For cycling fans—especially those whose pulse quickens when they hear the names of classic climbs like Mont Ventoux—Bill Strickland has written a book that manages to reveal new insights into Lance Armstrong's overanalyzed character. The author was granted extraordinary access in late 2008 and throughout 2009 as Armstrong returned to professional cycling after three years in retirement. Strickland is unabashed about his love for the sport. You can hear the whirring of tires and the gunning of support car engines as he takes readers along for the ride. ROBERT MERRILL, AP

Samuel L. Jackson stars as Henry "H" Humphries, whose specialty is interrogation. When Steven Younger (Michael Sheen), a nuclear expert-turned-terrorist, claims to have planted nukes in three different cities, H is brought in to find out where. His assignment is shared by FBI agent Helen Brody (Carrie-Anne Moss), who is appalled at H's ruthless methods that include torture. Just how far should an interrogator go if the information he gets can save millions of lives? DOUG NYE, MCT

This really isn't a good movie but it has developed something of a cult following because it's basically soft-core pornography. Elizabeth Berkley plays Nomi Malone, a young woman who comes to Las Vegas in hopes of making it big. Among other things, she becomes a lap dancer. DOUG NYE, MCT

JOAN RIVERS: A PIECE OF WORK (R)

The real Joan Rivers

Before Joan Rivers was criticizing red carpet fashion and winning “The Celebrity Apprentice,” she was guest-hosting for Johnny Carson and establishing herself as a fearless comedian and devoted actress. As Rivers turns 75, documentarians Ricki Stern and Anne Sundberg look back on Rivers’ career and follow her current schedule as she strives not to be forgotten or ignored.

The buzz: Nominated for the Grand Jury Prize at the Sundance Film Fest, “A Piece of Work” certainly picks an unexpected subject. It also doesn’t load itself up with a million anecdotes or nostalgia; Rivers clearly is all about working today so she’ll have something to do tomorrow, and the movie focuses largely on the now.

The verdict: A wonderful microcosm of the peaks and valleys of life in showbiz, and a truly surprising film that may turn some viewers’ hatred of Rivers into respect, if not fondness. “A Piece of Work” recognizes Rivers’ startlingly open-minded ambition—she half-jokingly says she’d knock out her teeth to sell dentures—while presenting essential details like her index-card catalogue of all her jokes, identified alphabetically with labels like “Cooking-Tony Danza.” More background would form a complete portrait of how she became such a ruthless and driven performer, but the movie moves with such effortless grace you won’t realize that until it’s over. Rivers sees less shame in a middle-of-nowhere gig than in an empty calendar, and in “A Piece of Work” we see her plastic surgery and persistence as both admirable and bittersweet as part of a lifelong campaign to be loved.

New Wave brunch

By M. Kathleen Pratt

Since hotel restaurants have a built-in brunch clientele, it's easy enough to skate by with blueberry pancakes and eggs Benedict—and many do. Any effort to spruce things up shows dedication, but the just relaunched brunch menu at Wave, the longstanding restaurant in the lobby of the W Hotel Lakeshore, goes above and beyond. The hand-written offerings read like something you'd find at Lula, Mado or any other ambitious, farm-focused spot, highlighting local producers, house-made preserves and cheeses, and artisan breads. But can a revamped menu overcome middling service and dated decor? It depends where you're coming from.

Server says: You can't go wrong with the bagel sandwich, featuring house-cured salmon and caper crema ($12). If you're really hungry, the grilled skirt steak with potato hash and chimichurri ($17) is a good bet.

We say: Try a plate of garlic rice accompanied by Filipino sausage patties, tomato salad and over-easy eggs ($12, right) instead. The dish is worth ordering for the juicy, salty-sweet soy-laced sausage alone, but when taken together, the egg yolk, tangy tomato-onion salad and fragrant sticky rice make for a welcome break from breakfast standards.

Pass on: The Goose Island 312-brined fried chicken and aged cheddar waffle ($16). Everyone in town's doing some variation on this dish, and many are doing it better. The chicken holds its own, but the waffle was made so soggy by the slaw piled on top that we had to leave a large portion untouched.

Just for fun: Order a house-made "Pop-Tart" ($3.50). The flaky pastry pockets are filled with house-made preserves, and the spiced apple filling we sampled was eerily reminiscent of the apple strudel Pop-Tarts of our childhood.

Lunchtime yet? The menu favors breakfast fare, but a couple of dishes, such as lamb shawarma with spicy harissa ($13), cross into lunch territory.

Buzz factor: Coffee pots are delivered to the table when you order a cup and remain through the meal. It's not the classiest approach, but it means no wait for refills. (This turned out to be important, as our server had a tendency to go missing.)

Crowd surfing: The trick to avoiding out-of-towners fretting about traffic to O'Hare: Sit outdoors on the breezy east terrace, where you'll have a view of the lake (across Lake Shore Drive) rather than the back of the concierge's head.

Nutrition TMI?

Force-feeding consumers health stats could backfire, experts say

Associated Press

Walk into a U.S. restaurant these days, and you might be able to check the calorie count of your enchilada, the salt content of your fries, the “heart healthy” status of your asparagus peppercorn steak and, in at least one pioneering place, the carbon footprint of your vegetable lasagna.

Welcome to the era of the menu as a spreadsheet.

More restaurants, either by mandate or by choice, are bombarding diners with calorie counts and other information. The disclosures on menus, menu boards and pamphlets are a victory for health advocates who believe informed consumers will make healthier food choices.

But the profusion of numbers makes one wonder: Is it possible to give diners too much information about their food?

“At some point, having too much information might actually hurt, because it may start to confuse,” says Barry Popkin, a professor of nutrition at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Popkin is one of the many advocates who support current laws in New York City, Seattle and elsewhere that require chain restaurants to post calorie counts next to food listings. A similar nationwide requirement recently was approved as part of an overhaul of the U.S. health care system. The U.S. Food and Drug Administration has a year to write the rules.

People who study nutrition and psychology say the rule of thumb for making information useful is to keep it short and sweet so that a person looking up at a fast-food menu board can digest the information quickly.

Popkin said a good example of what to avoid is the “Nutrition Facts” labels on packaged foods that are packed with preserving and daily recommended value information for the likes of fat and fiber. He said the labels are useful only to scientists.

While some early research has shown calorie counts affect consumer choice, not all studies show that. Even in cities with simple calorie postings, like Albany, N.Y., customers often say they either failed to notice the numbers next to the prices and menu listings or failed to heed them.

“To me, it’s something I ignore,” Martin Momodu said as he walked from an Albany McDonald’s, biting into a 360-calorie McChicken sandwich. “When I come here, I’m kind of in a rush.”

Beer pong gets totally serious, bro

Associated Press

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. There was a time when all you could get from playing beer pong was drunk.

Now, you can get rich, too.

What started out as a drinking game has blossomed into a nationwide competition with a $25,000 first prize, all for doing what millions of college kids do when they should be studying.

Tuesday night in Atlantic City, Michael Seviert and Byron Findley of Sacramento, Calif., split the top prize as their team, “Drinkin’ Smokin’ Straight West Coastin’,” bested all comers.

Organizers of the World Beer Pong Tour hope the national tournament and $50,000 worth of prize money will help put a respectable face on the activity. Exhibit A: The cups in the tournament are filled with water, not beer. (The cups and balls do, however, carry the logo of getbombed.com, a company that sells beer pong supplies and helps sponsor the tournament.)

“No one is here to get drunk or act like fools,” said Sam Pines, commissioner of the tour and a beer pong fanatic who picked up the game at Marist College in Poughkeepsie, N.Y., in 2006. “It’s a little rowdy, but it’s like any other sporting event. It’s all about competition and skill.”

Rich Patchett, 22, of New Bedford, Mass., and Pavel Braude, 23, of West Yarmouth, Mass., call their team Jewbacca. Their T-shirts depict the hairy “Star Wars” character wearing a yarmulke. Drinking is way down on the list for them.

“We definitely have the side beers going, but you don’t fill up your cups with beer anymore,” Patchett said. “That’s totally ’90s.”

But not everyone got the message. Brian Bailey, a 25-year-old unemployed Maine resident, fancies himself the best beer-ponger on the planet. He and a pal call their team Shot-Callin’ Ballers.

“I play all day with beer,” said Bailey, who was one of about 100 contestants who looked like Eminem. “It’s like, we get hammered and make cups all day. I drink all day, and I make cups all day. That’s what I do. That’s my life.”

“No one is here to get drunk or act like fools. ... It’s all about competition and skill.”

KAKURO

Enter a number between 1 and 9 in the empty squares. The clues are the numbers in the white circles that give the sum of the solution numbers: above the line are across clues; below the line are down clues. Thus, a clue of 3 will produce a solution of 2 and 1, and a 5 will produce 4 and 1, or 2 and 3, but, of course, which squares they go in will depend on the solution of a clue in the other direction. No digit can be repeated in a solution. Answer at redvechicago.com/puzzles. EDITED BY MICHAEL MEPHAM

SCRABBLE

Make a 2- to 7-letter word from the letters in each row. Add points of each word, using scoring directions at right. Finally, 7-letter words get a 50-point bonus. "Blanks" used as any letter have no point value. All the words are in the Official Scrabble Players Dictionary, 4th Edition. Find the answer at redevechicago.com/puzzles.

KEN: JUSTIN BIEBER

Whoa! Swoop alert! New character Ken rocks a serious Bieber-esque swoop in the ads for "Toy Story 3." Interesting: We know Ken's hair is plastic, but the verdict's still out on Bieber's.

WOODY: JAKE GYLLENHAAL

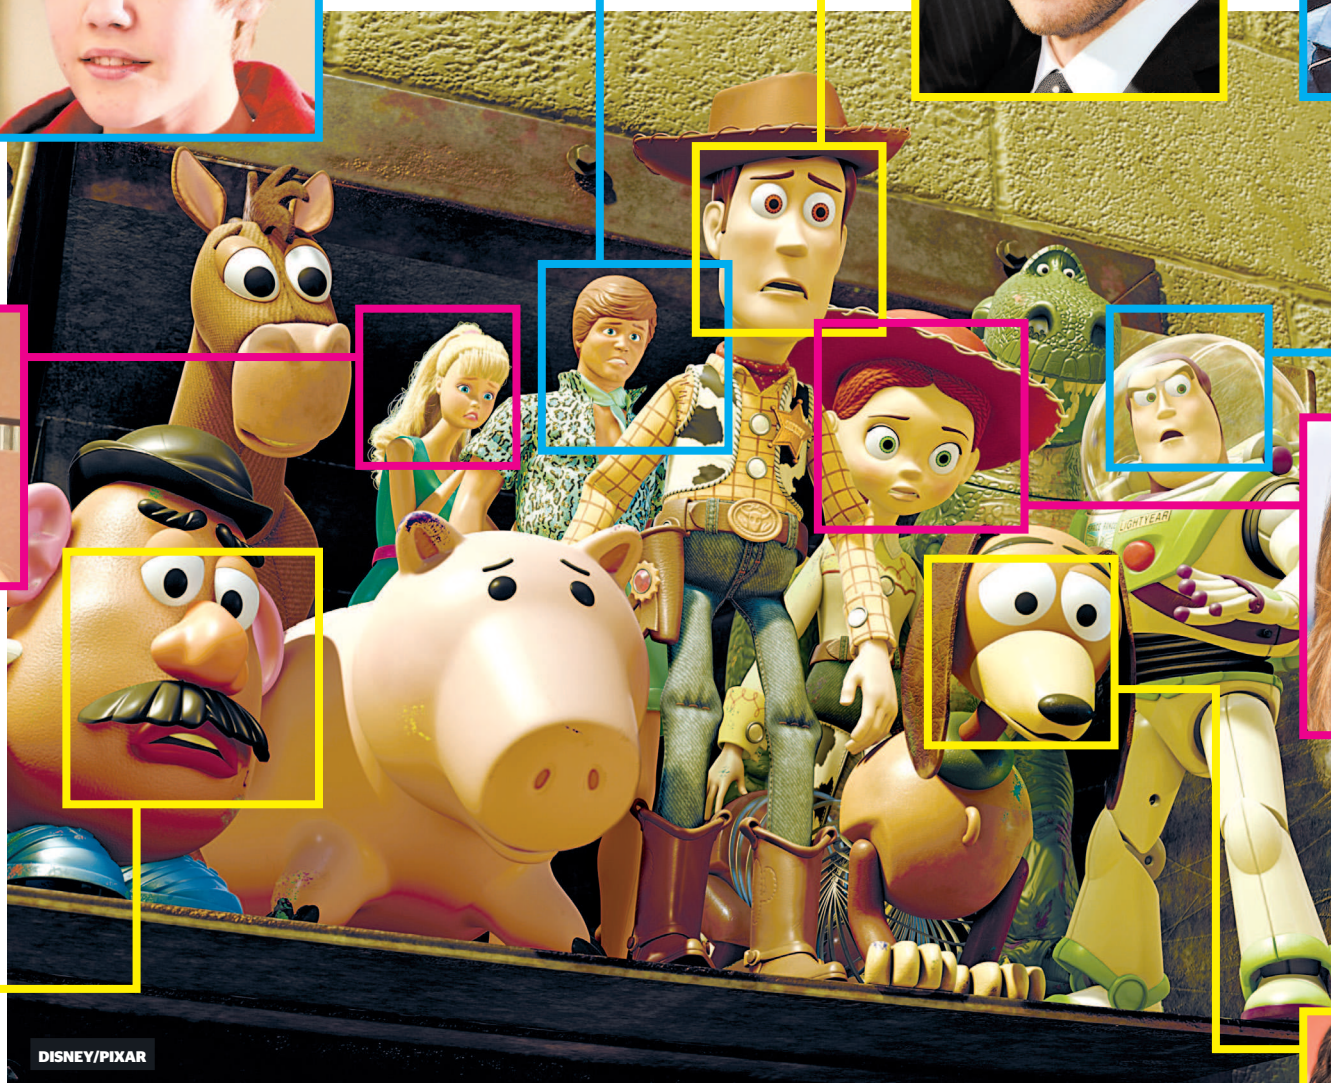

BUZZ LIGHTYEAR: KEVIN JAMES

With that chin and those expressive eyebrows, James can easily jet from Queens to infinity and beyond!

BARBIE: BROOKLYN DECKER

As civilization's closest real-life Barbie, this year's Sports Illustrated swimsuit cover model has the slammin' bod to pull off Barbie's skintight aerobics ensemble.

DISNEY/PIXAR

JESSIE: MILEY CYRUS

Like her cowgirl counterpart, Miley can be cloyingly cutesy and has an annoying accent.

MR. AND MRS. POTATO HEAD: JERRY STILLER AND ESTELLE HARRIS

Harris already voices the female spud, and we can't imagine anyone but her old "Seinfeld" spouse Stiller standing crankily by her side.

SLINKY DOG: JAMES FRANCO

Slink, a kind-hearted dog, possesses a soft voice and mellow 'tude that make him seem like a stoner. Franco, who has puppy dog eyes, is Hollywood's go-to stoner actor.

Andy's new friends

'Toy Story' characters remind us of certain actors—and not the ones who voice them

Memo to Tom Hanks: If you think just because you voice Woody in the "Toy Story" movies that you're a shoo-in to play him in any future live-action version, think again. That role definitely is going to Jake Gyllenhaal. Seriously. Just take a good look at Woody's brown hair, long face, square jaw—he's got all the makings of a plastic Gyllenhaal. The Interwebs have noticed too, with meme-master BuzzFeed deeming the resemblance "uncanny."

That got us thinking. No way could the 57-year-old Tim Allen pull off playing Buzz Lightyear either. So, as we head out to see "Toy Story 3" this weekend, we'll already be trying to imagine these more modern actors as our favorite toys. ARIEL ALEXOVICH, REDEYE

THE DIGIT

18 inches

That's the diameter of Megan Fox's corset-pinched waistline (below) in "Jonah Hex," she tells MTV News. "But in the action scenes, we loosened it up," Fox said, "because everyone was afraid I was going to pass out."

Ozzy Osbourne

Doctor's orders

Celebrity advice keeps coming from more and more unlikely places. Ozzy Osbourne, the so-called Prince of Darkness whose drug and alcohol abuse is the stuff of legend, is writing a "Dr. Ozzy" health column for Britain's London Times, according to billboard.com.

"It's not serious," Osbourne told the music site. "I mean, I'm the last [bleeping] person to ask for help. I'm not a [bleeping] doctor. I don't know what I'm talking about most of the time. ... But a lot of what I talk about is basically common sense."

Meanwhile, the Kardashian sisters have released the name of their new book, according to usmagazine.com. "Kardashian Konfidential," due out in November, will include "lots of pictures" and relationship advice.

"I think Steve Jobs is really sexy. Now that I'm older, I'm really turned on by geniuses and big brains."

Cyrus isn't faking

Miley Cyrus (left) does not lip-sync, and the proof is in the poor performance. "YouTube me because half the comments are like, 'She sounds like crap!'" Cyrus said Thursday on "Late Show with David Letterman." "I'm like, 'At least I'm singing live, so take that.'"

More Jersey, less Italy

The producers of MTV's "Jersey Shore" have promised to tone down derogatory Italian references on the reality show, the head of an Italian-American group told the AP. "I'm cautiously optimistic," said Andre DiMino, national president of UNICO, who recently met with reps from MTV's parent company, Viacom. "With a program like this, it's still trash television, and it would be unfortunate if they don't de-Italianize the program."

Swift and Mayer

Swift's biggest fan

Taylor Swift's rapid ascent is "no accident," her friend and collaborator John Mayer says, according to The Associated Press. "Don't confuse everybody loving one thing as hype," Mayer said Thursday at the Songwriters Hall of Fame in New York as he presented Swift, 20, an award for your songwriters with promise. "Sometimes, that's everyone agreeing that it's fabulous."
